SEA BUCKTHORN CONCENTRATE

Sea Buckthorn, known as the 'Miracle Wonder Plant' and 'Indian Super Fruit,' is a golden-orange berry from Ladakh's mountains. It's packed with bioactive compounds, amino acids, fatty acids (including Omega 3, 6, 9. and 7), minerals, and vitamins, particularly Vitamin C. Extensive research supports its health benefits. Sea Buckthorn products typically contain 99.9% Sea Buckthorn Pulp, rich in its valuable fruit oil.

EXCELLENT REMARKS

Bottles Sold - 45,000 and counting.

OUR USP: We control the entire supply chain of sea buckthorn. Our trained people pluck the ripe berries from the wild plants growing in forests of Nubra Valley which are then transported to the local pulping station for primary processing. The berries are washed thoroughly with fresh water to remove leaves, thorns and any unwanted matter and are then forwarded for pulping process.

The processed pulp is checked for its purity by sea buckthorn experts before being packed in 50L barrels with FDA approved preservatives which are then transported via roadways to the storage unit in Delhi. Nola has adopted a unique process for manufacturing India's best sea buckthorn supplements containing high amounts of sea buckthorn berry oil which makes our juices rich in Omega 3,6,7 & 9 fatty acids and Vitamin A, E, D and K.

HEALTH FROM HILLS TO HOME. THE PROCESS:

1 Procures the nutritious and ripe berries from the plants that grow in wilds of the foothills of the Himalayas. The harsh climatic conditions bless the berries with loads of nutrition.

2 We take the help of local farmers to harvest the berries by the age old 'beating the bush' technique. The locals have to go through dense thorny bushes to reach to the best berries and pluck them.

3 The berries go through first stage cleaning to remove unwanted materials like broken branches, and being highly perishable in nature they are filled in trays and are loaded in a transport vehicle to taken to the pulping station for processing.

4 The transport vehicle delivers the berries to primary processing station, managed and run by the locals, where they are weighed, cleaned, washed and sent to the pulper.

8 The batch conforming to our quality standards are packed and our annual inventory is transported to our cold storage from where they are sent to our secondary processing unit as and when the need arrives.

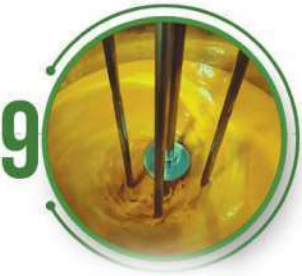

7 The processed pulp being very nutritious is highly perishable. Before being stored in sealed containers it has to be tested against certain standards of purity and quality for which sample is taken from each batch and sent for primary testing.

6 The cleaned berries are then poured into the pulping machine which not just pulps but also removes seeds and other by-products of the process. We do not extract berry oil from the processed pulp which ensures the presence of all oil-soluble nutrition like Omega fatty acids and Vitamins A, E, D & K in our products.

5 The berries, after being weighed, are forwarded to the washing station where they are cleaned and washed to make them free of all unwanted material like thorns, leaves and all berries that got crushed during the road transport.

9 The raw pulp is processed in a sanitised environment and herbs are added as per the formulation. The entire process is carried out as per FSSAI guidelines in an ISO & GMP certified facility.

10 The processed end product is filled into bottles and is sealed to preserve the nutrition and lock the microbes away. Standard operating procedures are followed to pack the product in order to provide the best possible shelf life.

11 The finished product is sent to the warehousing facility ready to be shipped on demand of our customers. We take pride in shipping the products to all the states of the country and several locations in different parts of the world.

12 We control the complete supply chain of sea buckthorn ensuring you get nutrition of the highest quality in the world. The feelings of having your glass of sea buckthorn will take you to the pristine mountains of the Himalayas each time and fulfil our purpose of bringing Health from Hills to your Home.

According to scientific studies all medicinal properties of sea buckthorn are similar to the legendary Sanjivani Buti, which was used to revive Lord Shree Ram's younger brother Lakshman Ji. That's why it is also called Sanjivani Buti.

Sea buckthorn's Latin name is "Hippophae rhamnoides" which literally means "shiny horse". The Greeks used to give sea buckthorn to their racehorses and war horses for better health and shiny hair.

Nutritional compounds and health benefits of sea buckthorn have been mentioned for centuries in medicinal books of Europe and Asia. The ancient Tibetan medical book of the 18th century "Sibu Yidian" describes sea buckthorn's health benefits and nutritional compounds in 30 pages.

Mongolian emperor Changez Khan was the emperor of 13TH century. He had faith in his three powers namely a well-arranged army, a strong discipline & sea buckthorn. Changez Khan regularly used to give sea buckthorn to his soldiers & their horses to increase their strength & stamina.

The Defense Research & Development Organisation of India has been researching sea buckthorn for many years. Sea buckthorn is also part of the main diet of soldiers of the Indian Army who are in high altitudes.

In the 1980s Russian Cosmonauts were supplementing their diet with sea buckthorn in their space program and also used it to fight radiation.

Sea buckthorn is the main part of the diet of the Chinese Olympians. And in the 2008 Olympics in Beijing, sea buckthorn was the 'National Drink'.

There are now more than 200 research studies on sea buckthorn for its number of health benefits.

Researches indicate that sea buckthorn has the potential to rejuvenate stem cells which can be a massive game changer in preventive healthcare.

* Documented in more than 40 pre-clinical & research studies published since 2000.
